

doc in my drive.

no memory of how.

Recent history for context:

Dad has declined in ability to physically move for the last several years. For example, in 2019 there was an incident of him falling in public and army crawling to get back to his hotel from South Coast Plaza. He refuses help and lies about events like these, trying to hide any concerns. He has had multiple strokes and a series of incidents like these but tries to hide them the best he can and will not accept help when they are learned about. There are several falls and strokes we found out about that were hidden from us since 2014 (3 known) and unsure of how many have occurred without our knowledge. In December 2023, we learned about a recent fall that occurred when he tried to get his mail (it had actually occurred 3-4 weeks earlier). He [was outside on the ground for over 2 hours until a neighbor found him. Ever since, he was too scared to get the mail or shower. His timelines of last shower, house cleaning, etc. do not add up and are likely much worse than expressed. This has spiraled into terrible hygiene, bills going unpaid (unable to get the mail and refusing to sign up for autopay), thus service(s) turning off, medication not getting delivered (thus not taken), etc. This triggered a visit from Amy, Annie, and Jay in December 2023.

*known vs
unknown.*

December 2023: Dad did not look good, had not showered for weeks, house was a mess, not taking medications, etc. We spent that trip having a mobile groomer come out to give him a haircut and beard trim, made him feel comfortable enough to take a shower under supervision, had a professional house cleaner come out to try and clean it up, and began getting things in order. We had him sign necessary paperwork for Power of Attorney, took him to see a doctor where he had a series of tests run, picked up all prescription medications, setup a Life Alert unit at the house, stocked the house with frozen microwavable meals, and installed a lockbox on the exterior of the house with a key in case someone needed to access the house due to an emergency. We assembled a walker for him to use but he refused and asks to take it away. We left it in his living room. This visit was primarily focused on selling him on the dream of moving back home and leaving Vegas. Despite our best efforts and arrangements set as far as even finding his new replacement home in Huntington Beach, he declined. We got his best friend Ken involved to push and he still declined. Because his mental cognition was still there and he would not cooperate, we could not override his decision. This is especially frustrating because his manic depressive disorder (Bipolar) disallows him from feeling feelings. Anytime we sense an ounce of vulnerability or acceptance, he instantly becomes a hard exterior.

*dad.
familiar.*

Dad's communication with kids:

Dad does not call and does not text. On occasion, he will respond to a text message but it is not uncommon for a series of texts to go unresponded to. We have (read receipts) turned on his phone so we know if he was able to physically check a message. We also have (Find My) activated to see if the phone ever leaves the house. Additionally, we have a Life Alert unit set up in the house and emergency call buttons in high risk areas (ie. shower). Dad has likely not left the house more than twice in the last 2 years. Once in June 2023 when Jay and Ashley visited him and took him to dinner, and once in December 2023 when we took him to the doctor. His

the phone is how they love him.

daily routine is in/out of sleep all day/night (often seeing read receipts at 2am), sitting in front of the TV, drinking, and stepping out to the garage to smoke a cigarette roughly every hour or so.

Wednesday 10/23/24:

6am: Annie texts Jay asking if he's heard from Dad. Her most recent texts were not responded to and not read. We then texted and called, text did not show as delivered and phone went straight to voicemail.

7:02am: We call a medical check with the LVPD.

7:40am: We call Life Alert to ping his unit to see if he responds. He does not and we can only hear a loud TV in the background. 911 is dispatched.

8:23am: Police and ambulance arrive to find Dad on the ground in his laundry room. He is rushed to EMERGENCY at Mountain View Hospital. Amber Leitman (niece who lives about 40 minutes away) rushes to meet Dad at the hospital. Medical personnel expressed concerns regarding sepsis and rhabdo. He is transferred to a room around 12pm.

1:30pm: Amy, Annie, and Jay arrive to Dad's room. He is unaware/asleep. While he had an IV, his mouth and throat were completely hardened with thick mucus crusted onto all surfaces, unable to be pried off. The nurse and doctor had described it as waxy to Amber and no one could get it off. It sounded like a sock was in his throat. Annie and Jay put on gloves, got them wet, and began trying to clear his mouth. This was followed by grabbing sponges and putting them in his mouth to get water into him. After about 30 minutes, Dad came to and said "Feels like Heaven" - we continued and stayed with him all day although he was not really aware of where he was or what was going on.

- simile lands.

the
chorus.

7:00pm: Amy, Annie, and Jay go to Dad's house to see what had happened. TV still on, blood on the floor, hardened feces, disintegrated diapers, dead skin on the bed, moved furniture, broken trash can he must have fell on, etc. Overall, a very horrific scene to walk into. Fireplace and gas on. We cleaned it up, grabbed his phone and a few belongings.

Note: When recovering his phone and booting it back up, it appears the last read message was on Wednesday 10/16. Annie's message on Saturday 10/19 was delivered but not read, meaning his phone was still on at that time. But later that day Find My stopped working meaning his phone was likely off for 4 days. Unsure of how many total days he was on the ground unable to move without food or water.

list w/ no
main verb.
reads as a
prose poem.

Thursday 10/24/24:

4:40am - Jay gets a call from the hospital that Dad is awake. We all 3 tell him we're next door and will be right there. His speech very impaired, still sounds like a sock in the throat, he says "OK Great!"

6:00am - Amy and Annie visit with Dad but he's very confused and disoriented. Asks the same question repeatedly and does not remember anything. Likely has no idea who is talking to him.

8:00am - Jay relieves Amy and Annie so they can go to Denver for an overnight to do a live Serialously show. Jay walks into Dad's room finding him eating a receipt with one hand and has a fork backwards in the other. The hospital still has him noted as a regular diet with people dropping off meals such as spaghetti and meatballs and turkey dinners without helping him and leaving him unattended. At this stage he can barely move and his vision is completely impaired. As I stepped in to start feeding him he continued to grab at the plate and tried eating it like a pizza. He repeatedly put his hands and gown in his mouth thinking it was food, despite how many times I told him not to. He's in a desperate state of starvation and thirst. I tried feeding him the french toast and bacon they provided but he just sucked on the french toast and didn't understand. We then moved to all soft foods including apple sauce and liquids. Every few minutes Dad would ask me, "Where's Jay?"

*asked of
Jay.
recursive.*

11:00am - In-home care services consultation with Francesca - she spoke to Dad to quiz him. He continues to remember his name and birthdate but that's all. She asked "Who's this guy?" pointing to me and Dad responded, "This is Bud, he's a local in Vegas who I met on my way down here." She said, "I like to call him Jay" - his eyes glazed over and didn't respond. Very confused.

*he invents
a backstory
for his son.*

12:00pm-3:00pm - Trying to sleep but very agitated, tossing and turning, not comfortable, removing clothing, tugging at his catheter (eventually pulling it off). The nurses aren't strong enough to help so Jay is working with them to change his diapers, and move him when needed. Dad's agitation is showing with hallucinations. He thought the year was 1988 and did not believe it was 2024. He keeps saying we're teasing him and we keep assuring him we're not. They say it's best to keep reminding him of where he is and who he is to get him properly oriented. He asked me where his dad was a few times, made references to his brother Jim trying to kill him (note: Jim was psychotic and did try to kill his father). Both have been deceased for a long time. Dad kept saying he was being haunted and didn't believe I was Jay even though I kept reassuring him it was me and he's okay. He continued to insist he's on his deathbed and did not believe there's a way out. He made a handgun gesture with his fingers and put it in his mouth. He's going through spurts of coming to and insisting he's on his deathbed, talking about past people and events in the present, and sleeping.

inheritance.

4:00pm - Dad is given Benadryl to help with potential itching of sores and to help him relax a little bit. Jay assists with food and water (all liquids are thickened up with gel packs to help

*the family
reports ~~the~~
and moves on.*

swallow without coughing). He's now on 100% puree diet. Eventually he falls asleep and is able to relax. Jay tells nurses at switch shift to please continue monitoring throughout the night specifically with food and water. Each time he is given one he reacts like a man dying in the Sahara who hasn't had a sip of water in a week (which is practically the case).

7:00pm - Put a clean diaper on him, he went back to sleep. Jay leaves hospital for the night.

Friday 10/25/24:

8:00am - Jay arrives at hospital and Dad wakes up shortly after. His eyes stare blindly wide open saying "Hello?" when trying to communicate with him. I imagine he can't see more than a couple feet in front of him. Eventually he understands he's talking to Jay after multiple explanations and starts to sound more coherent in his speech. He knows his name, birthdate, and that he's in Vegas. He does not know he's in a hospital, does not know what year it is, and can't remember anything else. His short term memory is shot. He asks the same question every minute and forgets what the responses were to his questions, but is able to communicate back and forth and even has a sense of humor, just no baseline of reality.

8:30am - Jay feeds him purees and water and Dad is in Heaven continuing to gasp "That's delicious" and "Tastes like Heaven" - Today he is able to hold the cup and drink on his own. We typically do this until gets so tired he falls asleep.

9:00am-11:00am - Dad asks why he's so thirsty and asks what happened. Jay tells him he fell and was on the ground for several days without food or water. He burst into tears. At this point, I don't think he even remembers that conversation. He's also asked "Where's your mom" and other questions that the answers don't make sense to him about. I think he thinks he's in a different era. When Jay asks questions to try and gauge mental awareness, it is clear he's completely delusional. Jay asked, "Dad, who is my wife? Who am I married to?" He said "Mimi" (pronounced Mehmee). Jay said, "No, that was your YOUR wife." He asked, "When?" and started crying not knowing why she's not anymore. Again, I'm sure he doesn't remember this conversation happening. He asks, "Is she mad at me?" - Jay says "No, no one is mad at you." He says, "There are lots of reasons for them to be" and continues crying. Each one of those episodes lasts no more than a minute. He's had food and water, a little oral care, a new diaper, and is now sleeping again.

*grief in the
grammar.*

he knows.
one minute.
then gone.*

11:00am - Kidney doctor visits. Sodium levels remain high and are being monitored every 6 hours. He said based on his levels, there's no way he was down for more than a few of days which is reassuring, but also seems unlikely based on the evidence and timeline. Feels more like 4-7 days and a miracle he survived through it. Dr. is also assigning a cardiologist. All other tests have come back favorably and there are no indications of another stroke having been the cause of the fall. Jay asks him how is vision is and if it's blurry, he says "A little" - When getting closer and asking him how many fingers are being held up (4) he responds with "2". Moving

*grief
on a timer.*

even closer still "2". He's doing a good job holding the cup and drinking water on his own and continues to fall in and out of sleep.

11:45am - 2:30pm - Sleeping with intermittent vital checks and blood draws.

2:30pm-5:30pm - When Amy and Annie arrived and greeted him he seems confused but also said hello. He recognized Amy but when Annie asked him if he knew who she was he said "Joanie", his sister. Who has been deceased since 2014. He then asked Annie "does your dad know you're here?" To which Annie said, "you're my dad" and he said "no, your other dad." Annie said "you're my only dad" to which he responded "yeah right." When Annie asked who her other dad is he responded "I'm you're only dad."

*his dead
sister.*

He was very thirsty and hungry, but still on the puree diet. He didn't hold the cup on his own but Annie held the cup and helped him drink. He still was communicating that it was the best thing he ever had and at one point he looked at me and said "wow this is great, has your mom tried this before?"

As we continued to feed him he started regressing a bit from his behavior in the morning as now he was trying to eat his fingers, his blanket, and was not holding the cup on his own.

Annie asked him if he could see her and he responded yes. Annie sends him photos and videos of Theo and Emmy daily, which he always love so much so she showed him a picture of Emmy, bringing it close to his face so he could see, and she asked "Do you remember her?" and he responded "Wow she sure is a cute little girl, whoever she is." So then Annie pulled up a picture of Theo and showed that to him asking the same thing and he said "Wow he is cute" and he started pulling the phone closer to him like he recognized him, but then he tried eating the phone.

*the phone
with photos
of his
grandchildren.*

He was acting agitated and having difficulty getting comfortable but finally got into a comfortable position with his bedding and he dozed off. Dinner was delivered but we didnt want to wake him so we advised the nurses to feed him the next time he woke up. He had his potassium medicine and a blood draw while sleeping, we should have the results of the bloodwork today.

Even though his short term memory seems to be shot, his staple sense of humor remains intact throughout everything. He makes funny comments to the nurses and is his sarcastic self, he just doesn't know much else of what is happening.

*the person
surviving
the loss.*

6:00pm - Dad falls asleep and Jay, Amy, and Annie leave for the night.

Saturday 10/26/24:

8:00am - Amy, Annie, and Jay arrive at hospital to find Dad is not in his room. When asking the nurses, they said he was heavily agitated in the middle of the night to the point where he needed to be restrained and moved to the 5th floor of the north tower (Room 542) where he can be closely monitored (cameras in these rooms). This obviously caused an outrage being that we were not notified, no phone call, after explicit instructions to call day/night for anything.

8:30am - 9:00am - Dad is awake and communicating fairly clearly with Amy, Annie, and Jay. He knows his name and birthday but nothing else. Unlike previous days when quizzed about what year is it, how old he is, etc., he gets visibly sad/upset/scared that he doesn't know the answer so we have stopped the quizzes. Originally, they said this is good to reorient him to reality, but now it feels more like dementia. He continues to ask how his dad is doing, guesses to be in his 50s in terms of age, etc. Short term memory still feels shot so now we will start leaning into his guesses just to make him feel reassured and not scared.

*the pivot.
they stop
quizzing him.*

9:00am - 10:00am - Dad is sleeping and was briefly awakened for medicine. Kidney doctor came back in, sodium levels have come down significantly and is more in line with what is considered normal. The kidney doctor still says despite his phone having been dead for 4 days and last message checked 7 days prior to being discovered, it's physically impossible for him to have been without water for that long. His sodium levels were raised when he came in, but not to the extent they would be had that been the case, separate from the impossibility of surviving that long. So the cause and timeline of the fall remain a mystery, and the hope that the dementia symptoms being the cause of high sodium is now no longer. We will be asking the doctor to have a neurological exam and hopefully MRI performed. We hired Brightstar Care to have someone sitting with him 8 hours a day for when we cannot be here. Tianna has been assigned and is sitting next to his bed from 9am-5pm daily. Her instructions are to constantly make him feel comfortable, help with oral hygiene, assure him he's okay and in a safe place, and that he'll be out of here in just a couple of days. At this point, Dad's worst fear is being realized and often times when he's awake he's asking how much longer even though he really has no idea where he is or how long it's been; he just acknowledges that he's in bad shape and fearful of the situation.

11:00am - Dr. Ramogi (new physician assigned for the next week) examined Dad. Really nice doctor. Agreed to order MRI and neurological tests that will likely not happen until tomorrow. Amy and Annie went to Target to print out photos of us to familiarize him more and to have in his room when we're away. Tianna will need to show them to him in our absence.

*American
grief
errand.*

11:10am - Dad woke up briefly and we spoke to him and introduced him to Tianna. His speech is MUCH BETTER. Practically crystal clear. He says his throat is "just a little dry" but when asked if he wants more water he said "not right now" - this is great as the last few days he would not be one to decline water. Lights back off and back to sleep. I imagine he's sleeping 20 hours a day right now.

*capitalized
hope.*

12:45pm-1:30pm - Dad woke up and is speaking clearly. He is aware of who Amy, Annie, and Jay are but when trying to jog his memory and mentioning Emmy and Theo he either plays along or clearly does not know. He's very talkative and coherent with conversations, just not able to jog his memory on most things. His vision is still blurry. Amy and Annie printed out (14)

8"x10" photos to show him. He seemed to recognize some (Annie when she was little) but stared at several not knowing what they were but we walked him through by describing. He didn't seem to recall Jay getting married or Annie having kids. He's able to use his hand to drink on his own. When putting the photos in his hands he really likes it and holds onto each photo for a long time. Seems like his left eye works but not the right. Amy has taped up all the photos around his room. While he likely won't be able to see them because they're at a distance, hopefully while his vision improves he will.

1:30pm - Tianna brushed Dad's hair, cut his nails, brushed his teeth, and fed him.

Note: After going through Dad's emails, texts, and mobile app history, we have confirmed the last ordered meal was via Uber Eats on Tuesday 10/15. It remains a mystery how long he was without food/water. Annie spoke with the officer who was at the scene to tend to Dad and he clarified they did not move any furniture and worked on him in the laundry room where he was found then took him outside. This indicates that the fall did not happen in the laundry room as the chair was moved, clothes were removed, and blood was on the floor in the living room. He may have had multiple falls and it's possible his vision was blurry at that time as toys for Emmy and Theo were opened, Amazon packages had paper scraps on the ground, etc. Unsure as to what he may or may not thought was food/water in this delirious state. Seems he was likely crawling to try and get outside which would put him in the laundry room where he was found.

*the modern
inventory
of a death.*

*set design
of his
solitude.
reaching from the floor.
for years.*

2:15pm - Dad goes back to sleep.

3:45pm - Dad awakes. We visit with him and continue showing him photos, several of which are the same as from a couple hours ago, but he doesn't remember. We'll describe who is in photos but nothing is really registering, but he does seem to enjoy looking at them.

5:00pm - 6:00pm - Dad repeatedly asks to go to the bathroom and doesn't want to use a bedpan. For the first time in days, he's lifted up to use a walker to go to the bathroom with a team of 3 people. Eventually he reaches the toilet but doesn't use the restroom and doesn't understand why he's there or why there's so much walking around. At this time, one of the nurses discovers a series of open sores on his back that she believes to be shingles. The doctor is notified and photos are sent. This could be the cause of his itchiness the last couple of days. Another routine blood test is performed and the doctor is called up to examine him. We are waiting for him now. Tianna left for the night at 5:00pm. Dad fell back asleep.

7:00pm - Doctor has still not arrived and timeline as to when is unknown.

8:15pm - Doctor arrived and confirmed it is NOT shingles. Sodium has now dropped too low to 122 from 148 this morning due to too much Clearwater which he has just been pulled off of. Also finally got Dad's body weight changed in his chart from 330lbs to 180lbs. Upon being admitted 4 days ago his body weight was entered incorrectly and we've mentioned this multiple times each day. Leaving the hospital for the night now.

9:00pm - Annie spoke to the officer again who arrived on scene to ask what he was wearing. Officer said he was completely naked waste-down in the laundry room, only having a shirt on. We logged into the Ring Doorbell app on Dad's phone to see the footage, but the camera is offline (batteries must be dead).

the most
accurate
misspelling.

Sunday 10/27/24 (notes from Caretaker):

8:50 am: on arrival client was sleeping and family gave me update on client. Client does not have shingles, hospital staff has miscommunicated a lot of information to family and caregivers.

9:06 am: nurses came in for meds (nurses fed him a pudding with meds), change of IV fluids and to reposition

9:30 am: client finished ensure shake, did not touch food

9:52 am: client fell back to sleep

10:49 am: nurse came in and unhooked IV line. Client still sleeping

11:01 am: nephrologist came in. Clients sodium levels are normal.

* 11:12 am: internal medicine doctor came in with MRI results. Client had stroke. Will need round the clock care moving forward. No longer needs IV fluids and can hydrate with water.

news
arrives
flat.

11:36 am: nurse came in to take vitals

[Vitals 134/71. 64 pulse 94% oxygen 36.4 degrees Celsius (97.5 degree fahrenheit)

11:48 am: nurses came in to change brief and bedding and get client cleaned up.

12:00 pm: internal medicine doctor requested the neurologist come for a consult as well as physical therapy and infectious disease

12:11 pm client fell back asleep

12:30 pm: neurologist came in did neuro check. Ordered a CT for head and neck. Is sending cardiologist for consult and to do Echo.

12:40 pm: physical therapist came in and assisted him with sitting, standing and some coordination exercises. He will sit in recliner for 1-2 hours and every hour he should try coordination exercises.

12:56 pm: infectious disease physician came in. He does not have shingles, rash could be from new medication. Is recommending they put him on steroids.

every device
failed.

voice
shift.
now
'client.'
not
'dad.'

1:13 pm: speech therapist came in. Will be doing a swallow evaluation (mixing Barium which shows up on an X-ray with apple sauce) he will eat the mix and they will track the food on X-ray to make sure he is swallowing correctly. This will be done tomorrow October 28th. He will remain on puree food and slightly thickened liquids for now.

1:30 pm: nurse came in put him back in bed to change his brief. He had a bowel movement.

1:50 pm: clients lunch was delivered. Client was sleeping so he did not eat yet.

2:26 pm: nurse came in to notify us he will be moved to room 538 (private room) shortly

2:35 pm: tech came and got him for the head and neck CT scan

3:10 pm: moved rooms to 538

3:20 pm: client came back from CT. CT was unsuccessful, client tried to get up and almost fell. Clients IV blew.

3:35 pm: phlebotomist came to draw blood for testing

3:45 pm: vitals 166/75 pulse 60 oxygen 99% 36.4 degree Celsius (97.5 degrees Fahrenheit)

scans as poetry.

4:20 pm: nurse came in to redo clients IV.

4:45 pm: taken down for a CT again and was unsuccessful again. lv blown.

*twice.
the body
resisting.*

5:06 pm: back in the room, nurses changed brief and got him cleaned up

Monday 10/28/24 (notes from Caretaker):

7:00 am: upon arrival client was still sleeping. Spoke to night nurses and client did not sleep at all last night. Was very agitated, kept trying to get up, kept removing his brief and soiling the bed. He did not eat at all other than having a whole ensure shake.

7:55 am: ultrasound tech came to do cardiac echo on client.

8:14 am: 165/65 pulse 64 oxygen 95% temp 36.7 degree Celsius (97.7 degrees Fahrenheit)

8:30 am: client went down for head and neck CT that was supposed to be done yesterday

9:13 am: client and I returned to the room. CT scan was successful but IV was infiltrated at the end. Radiology removed IV. When we came to the room breakfast was there. Client refused and said he wanted to wait a little while.

9:37 am: nurse came in to change brief and get him cleaned up.

9:40 am: physical therapist came in. Got client to stand and do a few steps forward, backward, and to each side.

10:00 am: client finished a whole ensure shake

10:02 am: radiology came for the swallow test x ray

11:24 am: client and I arrived back to room. Client is to stay on puree foods and not use a straw. Client needs to be attended while eating foods. Liquids need to be thickened. During test client was experiencing left side aphasia and was bringing up past memories.

swallow test as memory
test.

11:26 am: 134/66 pulse 82 oxygen 95% temp 36.5 degree Celsius (97.7 degree Fahrenheit)

11:36 am: nurse came in to give meds. Blood pressure medicine, aspirin, steroid

11:40 am: CNA came in to give bed bath, change brief and change sheets and brush teeth.

12:09 pm: nurse notified me that internal medicine doctor and nephrologist came while client and I were down at X-ray. No other info was relayed.

12:22 pm - 2:38 pm: client took nap

2:38 pm: neurologist came in and did a check. She made sure his meds were correct and checked his movements.

Additional notes: physical therapist is coming back to work with him at 4:00 pm. Client still has not had any of his food but has drank 2 cups of thickened water and 1/2 cup of thickened apple juice. His daughter Annie was here with him at the end of shift.

Evening - Dad had two vomiting episodes that could have been the cause of the medication but unsure. Most recent chest x-ray shows shadow behind lung and possible pneumonia. No details on this yet. Memory not improving and seeing people who are not there.

Tuesday 10/29/24:

Morning/Afternoon - Dad is sleeping a lot today; could be the cause of the sleep aid given last night when he was agitated and restless. When briefly awake he referred to thinking it was 2010 and he was in Miami. Unsure of the reference.

6:50 am: on arrival client was sleeping. Nightshift caregiver informed me that client vomited twice and had very high blood pressure. Nightshift CNA informed me that he had an X-ray done and more orders were being put in for today. CNA also informed me that client's son was contacted. Client is also on portable heart monitor.

7:17 am: phlebotomist came in to draw blood

7:49 am: vitals 114/62 pulse 84 oxygen 92% Temp 37.1 degrees Celsius (98.7 degrees Fahrenheit)

9:02 am: breakfast was brought in, client still sleeping.

9:37 am: nurse came in to give meds, blood thinner, baby aspirin, antibiotic and steroids. Nurse also informed me client is NPO other than taking meds until cleared by speech therapist to swallow. (Meds administered at 10:04 am)

9:55 am: nurses cleaned him up and changed his brief

11:12 am: vitals 114/75 pulse 74 oxygen 91% temp: 36.6 degrees celsius (97.8 degrees Fahrenheit)

12:06 pm: internal medicine physician came in and did a quick check on client. Also spoke to the family on the phone. He ordered a new swallow test due to the complications last night. Also spoke about different options to make sure the client is getting proper nutrients. Need to wait for results of swallow test before decision is made.

1:36 pm: cardiologist came in for an update. Echo was clear. He is still planning on the TTE procedure most likely tomorrow. Family was under the impression that was no longer happening.

1:45 pm: nurse came in to do a check in and do a nuero check. Client struggled with left side arm and leg raises and was not able to follow the pen with his eyes. Unclear if it was because he just woke up again.

2:33 pm: phlebotomist came in to take more blood for blood tests

Additional notes: physical therapist will be coming to work with him around 3:30-4:00 pm. IV amino acids and nutrients were ordered for client before I left should be started shortly.

Status on next steps: Jay, Amy, and Annie have been working diligently since last week to get all finances in order, transition plans, etc. The tentative plan is to have him released on a medical discharge from Mountain View in Las Vegas to Hoag ER on Thursday night 10/31 to arrive Friday morning 11/1. The timeline is designed to align with the switch from Medicare going from October to November for hopefully a seamless transition. Jay will accompany Dad in a private medical transport vehicle on Thursday night and Annie will help receive Dad at Hoag ER, where he will hopefully be admitted in a timely manner. Jay and Amy will fly back to Vegas on Friday to work on cleaning out Dad's house and managing his estate for the full time transition to CA. Full time placement TBD.

Wednesday 10/30/24:

Change of plans, we are signing Dad out of Mountain View hospital AMA to transfer him to St. Joseph's in Orange County. While this is technically AMA, it actually is also being advised by the doctor. It's incredible how many missteps a hospital makes if they're not being constantly supervised and nagged. Today Dad was going in for a surgery at 1pm that was not only not authorized, it was advised against by the neurologist and primary. It was an invasive EKG he would have to be put under for. Luckily, Amy was there to stop it from happening and unwind it all. Additionally, whole foods (spaghetti and meatsauce) have been delivered to the room for my dad to eat even though he's been on a puree diet since day 2.

hospital
=
opponent.

he's on puree.

Meanwhile, still no improvement in memory. Dad is not making sense when talking and continues to be forgetful of all conversations in the short term. We keep telling him he needs to eat food and we're leaving to go home tomorrow. He says, Alright! Good! He will forget this conversation happened. He's engaged in that moment though and excited about the optimism. We will continue this each day.

seemingly
happy
left.

Current plan:

- Jay flies to Vegas 10/31 in the early morning
- Sign Dad out of Mountain View AMA
- We hired a private medical transport service that will arrive at 12pm to drive Dad to Orange County. Jay will be in the car with him and there will be either a registered nurse or EMT in the car should something happen during the drive
- Jay has a Dr. friend at St. Joseph's who has agreed to receive Dad and handle the intake (Dr. Kolski)
- Kolski is also pulling strings with Case Worker and a number of other people to treat the situation with great care. While Dad is in the hospital, we will work with case worker on permanent placement in OC.
- Amy and Jay will spend the weekend winding down Vegas estate while Annie and Mom take shifts watching over Dad at St. Josephs

Caretaker notes for today:

6:56 am: on arrival client was sleeping. Nightshift caregiver said he had a good night and that he prefers to sleep on his left side which has been his usual. Nightshift nursing staff gave me no updates will wait for shift change to confirm he did the tests he was supposed to do yesterday.

7:45 am: I cleaned client up, changed his brief and gown and changed out his sheets and pillows. Repositioned him to his back.

8:24 am: vitals 113/64. Pulse 72 oxygen 92% temp: 36.3 degrees Celsius (97.3 degree Fahrenheit)

*rosary
of
attention.*

9:03 am: nurses came in to give medication

10:45 am: nurses came in to change IV

11:05 am: IV antibiotics administered (4 hour drip)

11:10 am: internal medicine doctor came in. Cleared client to eat and drink. Will not be having another procedure as of right now. Need to track how much he is eating and drinking

11:50 am: client drank 4 oz of thickened apple juice

12:28 am: vitals 114/61

Pulse 67

Oxygen: 94%

Temp 36.6

3:27 pm: vitals 128/72 pulse 73 oxy 90% temp: 98.8 degree Fahrenheit

3:30: I cleaned client and changed brief, gown, chuck and bedding. We repositioned to his back

3:56 pm: nurse came in and gave client his heparin injection in the stomach

5:24 pm: nurse came in to give client his IV antibiotics

6:50 pm: client had a minor episode. Was very quick to turn it around. He did rip a pillow because he was "opening a bag of chips" because he was "getting ready". He did attempt to get out of bed but didn't even make it to the edge of the bed before snapping out of it and curling back up with the blanket. I notified the nightshift nurse and turned his bed alarm on.

*hallucination
with purpose.
he was going
somewhere.*

Additional notes: client drank 3 - 6 oz cups of thickened water, about 2 oz of thickened chicken broth. 2 - 4 oz cups of thickened apple juice. 4 bites of vanilla puddle, 2 spoonfuls of apple sauce, 2 bites of mashed potatoes (did not like them said not enough flavor).

I explained to nightshift caregiver how to feed him and when his dinner comes to try and get him to eat some and to make sure it is pureed. I also told her every time he wakes up try and get him to drink either the broth or the water or juice to keep the fluids going.

Thursday 10/31/24 - Wednesday 11/6/24:

Dad checked into St. Joseph's in Orange.

Thursday 11/7/24:

Dear Family,

We wanted to update you on our Dad. As many of you know, he was admitted to Mountain View Hospital on October 23 following a fall at home. Initially, the cause of his fall was unclear, but an MRI later revealed he had suffered a major stroke, affecting the back of his brain. This stroke, along with dementia, has impacted his ability to swallow safely, causing him to aspirate when he eats or drinks. Despite multiple tests, exercises, and consultations with doctors and speech therapists, he has shown no signs of improvement, and there is even concern of regression. A feeding tube would be required to sustain his life, possibly on a permanent basis.

After much discussion and careful review of Dad's healthcare wishes, as well as a heartfelt moment of clarity he had with us, Annie, Jay, Ken Sanders, and I have made the decision to release him into hospice care. He has been discharged from the hospital and moved to a rented home in Newport Beach, where he can spend his final days surrounded by family, love, and comfort. This home has a beautiful ocean view where he can look out from his hospital bed in the living room, with us gathered around, cooking, playing music, and sharing laughter—just as he would want. We know how he dislikes sadness and tears.

We welcome anyone who would like to say goodbye. If you would like to visit, please reach out, and we'll make arrangements. Thank you to everyone who has reached out; we feel your love, and so does he.

With love and gratitude,
Amy, Annie, and Jay

genre
shift.
log -> letter.

they had to rent
somewhere
for him
to die.

✖✖

what was said?
the family
keeps this.

they are still managing
him.
still arranging around his refusals.

*the document ends on a period
on its own line.*

*it does not say he died.
it does not need to.*